1. Executive summary

The contents of this analysis report present a listing of the requirements mandated by the client for the Acme-SF project in its D01 version. For each requirement, a breakdown is provided (if applicable), including a verbatim copy of the referenced requirement, detailed analysis conclusions and decisions made to address the requirement. A breakdown will be deemed necessary when the requirement requires any sort of analysis; otherwise, no commentary will be necessary.

3. Introduction

The content of this document aims to conduct a comprehensive study of the requirements provided by the client for the successful completion of the current project, Acme-SF. By meticulously analysing and documenting them, it focuses on accurately identifying potential conflicts or ambiguities that may arise.

This objective is intended for the three detailed requirements; one involving functionality implementation and two involving the preparation of managerial documentation which include an analysis report and a planning and progress report.

The document is structured starting with a cover page containing relevant information about the document, such as its title, the project's repository, the group number, the author or authors' names with their corresponding corporate email addresses, and the date. The document proceeds with a table of contents, an executive summary, and an introduction before delving into its content. The analysis report focuses on the individual requirements specific for each student, being in this case, the third one (student #3). As mentioned earlier, a breakdown of each requirement will be provided whereas applicable. Finally, the document ends with a conclusion summarizing the presented information and an appropriate bibliography. This structure, as described and used, is outlined in the "Annexes" document, provided by the University of Seville.
